Exercise 1

“What are you bringing to the party?” was a question asked in a job interview. The boss wanted to know more than what was in the résumé. Would the applicant fit with the team,* be able to work well under deadlines and be able to add a dimension that the boss had not thought about?

Let us know what you are bringing to the party. What strengths, passions, habits and interests are you bringing to this class that make your contribution unique?

You can express yourself in any format (print, 3-dimensional design, writing, web). You need to be able to publish it on the web by either creating it specifically for the web or scanning/taking a picture of the original.

This will be put on the course web space.

*Successful teams have a diversity of ideas and approaches to problem solving while maintaining a respect for each other and a commitment to the project.
