Dear MSU Graduate Students,

The Spring has brought many professional and personal challenges to us all. In light of this, as you may know, we have introduced an option of a binary grading system. If you are taking courses this Spring semester, you will have the option to have your final grades in a course transcribed on an S/NS (satisfactory/not satisfactory) scale. For graduate students, the threshold between S and NS is 2.0. Faculty will submit their grades as usual to the Registrar’s Office at the end of the semester, and you will have two weeks beginning May 6 to view your grades and decide on a class-by-class basis if you would prefer to have your grades recorded on your transcripts with the numerical 0.0-4.0 grade or with S/NS.

You are strongly encouraged to work with your advisor and program to determine possible implications of your choices.

Grades recorded as S/NS will not be calculated into your official cumulative GPA, but your program and college may use your numerical 0.0-4.0 grade to apply degree progression policies such as whether or not a course will count toward your degree, or whether you might be required to still demonstrate sufficient competency in a particular subject matter. Your program and college have been strongly encouraged to take into consideration this semester’s unusual circumstances when making such decisions.

Please note that all MSU transcripts that have any grade reported for Spring 2020 semester will include a statement explaining that the COVID-19 outbreak and the university’s decision to switch to remote-only instruction in the course of the Spring 2020 semester caused unusual disruptions.

Ultimately, we hope that this option will help alleviate some of the stresses you are experiencing during this very unusual time. Here is where you can find more detailed information regarding this reporting option. In addition, a specific set of FAQs has been developed to help you navigate this decision.
