Individuals provide interesting and unique talents not necessarily seen on the surface

“I started playing piano three years ago,” freshman Mike Green said. “I would love to play for my church someday when I become really good. My teacher also plays and we like to sit down and practice together. My teacher Mrs. Fern says I am improving greatly because I practice for 30 minutes a day. Photo by Jessi Brooks

“John Shepard always understands what he’s being taught,” math teacher John Gilbert said. “Along with doing exceptional homework, John placed in the top 10 percent in the Michigan Math Prize Competition. Photo by Katie Rausch

“I love to fence,” sophomore Brianne Holmes said. “I thought it would be an easy way for me to stay active. My mom also fences, so it is something we can do together. As it turns out, it is more challenging than I thought it would be. Photo by Katie Rausch

“Travis Kovalchek is extremely talented in French,” foreign language teacher Sarah Buys said. “He is always trying to expand his knowledge of French by asking questions about things we haven’t covered yet, like vocabulary. Photo by Katie Rausch

“I don’t know exactly why I started designing clothes,” junior Liz Rudd said. “I guess I always enjoyed being creative and coming up with my own ideas.” Photo by Katie Rausch

“When I was pogo sticking, I got tired of jumping normally so I tried it with no hands,” freshman Katie Hennig said. “Finally, I challenged myself to jump rope while pogo sticking.” Photo submitted by Katie Hennig
