Jenna,

It seems like just yesterday that you were picking four leaf clovers and doing somersaults in the outfield. From our little league days through your senior year, the many good times we’ve shared will always be a source of wonderful memories for me. Your dedication and perseverance are just two of your qualities that make me so proud of you. Even though you have grown into this beautiful, amazing young woman, you will forever be my Little Jen. God Bless you.

Love you,
Dad

RICK MORRIS
PRESIDENT
(810) 629-5210
let there be light

by Alexis Bunka

Soccer field lights shine for first time Nov. 8

How You Did It

1) What was the biggest obstacle to overcome in order to put up the lights on the soccer field?

2) How did you feel about earning the money for the soccer field's lights?

3) Why is it such a thrill to play under the lights rather than during the day?

“Coordinating the volunteers was probably the biggest obstacle,” soccer booster president Kim English said. “It was hard to find a time that was good for everyone. Some of the volunteers worked all day Friday and Saturday morning. We could not have done it without them.” Photo by Pam Bunka

“My favorite part was when we were holding the lights up for the first time,” senior Nick Berk said. “It was a really cool experience.”

“How was it for you?” junior Krystal Phillips asked. “Me too. I’m happy we finally have lights.”

“Working at the Renaissance Festival wasn’t cool but it was for a good cause,” sophomore Matt Bailey said. “Although it was a new experience with all of the costumes and people dressing as if they were in the Renaissance period, the people that I worked with made it fun to participate. Even though we all had to chip in and volunteer our time, I’m happy we finally have lights.”

“When you play under the lights you get more of a feeling of the actual sport,” junior Krystal Phillips said. “Sometimes I feel like I am a ‘special player’ because it is all lit up. Feeling special while you play always gets you more pumped up! The opportunity of having the lights is exciting to start off a new season.”

“Working at the Renaissance Festival wasn’t cool but it was for a good cause,” sophomore Matt Bailey said. “Although this was a new experience with all of the costumes and people dressing as if they were in the Renaissance period, the people that I worked with made it fun to participate. Even though we all had to chip in and volunteer our time, I’m happy we finally have lights.”

“Coordinating the volunteers was probably the biggest obstacle,” soccer booster president Kim English said. “It was hard to find a time that was good for everyone. Some of the volunteers worked all day Friday and Saturday morning. We could not have done it without them.” Photo by Pam Bunka

“Working at the Renaissance Festival wasn’t cool but it was for a good cause,” sophomore Matt Bailey said. “Although this was a new experience with all of the costumes and people dressing as if they were in the Renaissance period, the people that I worked with made it fun to participate. Even though we all had to chip in and volunteer our time, I’m happy we finally have lights.”

“When you play under the lights you get more of a feeling of the actual sport,” junior Krystal Phillips said. “Sometimes I feel like I am a ‘special player’ because it is all lit up. Feeling special while you play always gets you more pumped up! The opportunity of having the lights is exciting to start off a new season.”

“Coordinating the volunteers was probably the biggest obstacle,” soccer booster president Kim English said. “It was hard to find a time that was good for everyone. Some of the volunteers worked all day Friday and Saturday morning. We could not have done it without them.” Photo by Pam Bunka