Ratification

CTs vote 302 to 40 in favor

2 groups reconsider their “no” vote

When the nine unions representing 5,800 MSU employees announced the results of their ratification votes on Friday, February 5, seven of the groups had approved the new Health Care Memorandum of Understanding.

The Clerical-Technical Union’s vote was 302 to 40 in favor.

Two of the groups covered by the Health Care MOU, AFSCME Local 999 and the International Union of Operating Engineers Local 324, had rejected it.

“We’re disappointed,” said CTU President Deb Bittner.

“CTs recognize the value of a contract like this during these difficult economic times,” she said.

“Yes, we want to be compensated for our contributions to MSU, and yes, we know that we are already making sacrifices,” she said.

“However,” she added, “CTs are willing to accept this agreement, which guarantees wage increases while allowing the unions to continue working to lower health care costs at the source instead of shifting most of the increases to employees.”

At this time, efforts are underway to identify the specific issues and concerns that resulted in the two unions’ rejection in order to determine if they can be addressed and resolved.

Both groups have scheduled dates to revisit their decisions.

The agreement has not been adopted and remains in temporary status while these efforts are undertaken.

“We want to thank everyone for their support, patience and understanding as our colleagues in the other unions work through this matter,” Bittner said.

Editorial Policy: The CT News is the voice of our union. It is our vehicle for communicating, on a regular basis, the issues that confront us as workers. Through this newsletter we explain union policies, show how dues are spent, and explain the views and actions of the elected leadership for evaluation by the members.

The CT News is the voice of the membership. We welcome articles from members and stories about members.

While contributions are welcome, they should be constructive and contribute positively to the welfare of our union.

We will accept no attacks on any union leader or member. We will accept thoughtful discussion of all related issues in the letters section, and reserve the right to reply to those that seem to reflect a misunderstanding of the union and its policies.

I want to begin by thanking everyone who volunteered to help with the ratification vote and every member who voted. By agreeing to the new MOU, CTs voted to secure their future for the next four years.

Which makes it difficult, now, to wait to see how the two unions that voted against the tentative agreement will resolve their difficulties, but in the spirit of solidarity, that is what we must do. Both groups are discussing their options. Every union has its own democratic processes, which we respect. We can only wish them the best as they work through this issue.

Rest assured that the CTU membership will be kept informed as the facts are available to share.

With that said, there is another topic, one that has been weighing on my mind for awhile: the issue of internal civility.

The CTU is a democratic organization that is led by its members, and every single one of us has the right—and the duty—to speak up on issues of concern. Most members contribute respectfully and positively. And most people realize that in a democracy, some decisions will not appeal to everyone.

I am, however, taken aback somewhat when the union receives calls or emails that berate “the union” for doing, or not doing, something contrary to what a member prefers.

Don’t get me wrong, it would be worse to remain silent. While your elected union officials try to analyze every question from all sides, we rely on members to make sure we have all of the information and viewpoints as we approach decision-making. I just ask that you think twice before assuming that your union is ignorant or derelict in its responsibilities.

Your elected union officials are not faceless bureaucrats. With the exception of a full-time released president, union leaders work hard at MSU jobs and then turn around and give time and passion to the union. Negativity and shoot-from-the-hip, unfounded accusations take up time and, frankly, they weigh us down. [Karen Johnides]

I understand that some members remain quiet until anger, fear, confusion, suspicion, etc. cause them to lash out. In these times, with reports of economic and budgetary disasters, dooms-

A study released in November 2009 by the Center for Economic and Policy Research (CEPR) tracks some dramatic changes in the unionized workforce over the last quarter century.

In 1983, over half of all union workers were white men, few union workers had a college degree, and almost one-third were in manufacturing. In 2008:

▼ Over 45% of unionized workers were women, up from 35% in 1983. At current growth rates, women will be the majority of unionized workers before 2020.

▼ Only about one in ten unionized workers was in manufacturing, down from almost 30% in 1983.

▼ Just under half (48.9%) of unionized workers were in the public sector, up from about one-third (34.4%) in 1983. About 61% of unionized women are in the public sector, compared to about 38% for men.

▼ In rough terms, five of every ten union workers were in the public sector; one of every ten was in manufacturing; and the remaining four of ten were in the private sector outside of manufacturing.

▼ Latinos were 12.2% of the unionized workforce, up from 5.8% in 1983. Asian Pacific Americans were 4.6% of union workers, up from 2.5% in 1989.

▼ About one in eight (12.6%) union workers was an immigrant, up from one in twelve (8.4%) in 1994, the earliest year for which consistent data are available.

▼ African American workers were about 13% of the total unionized workforce, a share that has held fairly steady since 1983, despite a large decline in the representation of whites over the same period.

▼ Unionized workers were most likely to live in the Northeast (27.4%), the Midwest (25.7%), and the Pacific states (22.7%). A smaller share of the unionized workforce lives in the South (18.7%) and the West (5.6%). Since 2006, unionization rates have been increasing in the Pacific states (up from 17.6% in 2006 to 19.9% in 2008), the Northeast (up from 19.5% to 20.3%), and the West (up from 10.1% to 10.7%). Over the same period, unionization rates have been basically flat in the Midwest (at about 15.5%) and in the South (at 7.0-7.2%).

▼ The typical union worker was 45 years old, or about 7 years older than in 1983. (The typical employee, regardless of union status, was 41 years old, also about 7 years older than in 1983.)

▼ The most heavily unionized age group was 55- to 64-year-olds (18.4% of 55- to 64-year-old workers are in a union). The least unionized age group was 16- to 24-year-olds (5.7%).

▼ More-educated workers were more likely to be unionized than less-educated workers, a reversal from 25 years ago.

▼ Over one-third (37.5%) of union workers had a four-year college degree or more, up from only one in five (20.3%) in 1983. Almost half (49.4%) of union women had at least a four-year college degree.

These trends in the composition of the unionized workforce, in part, reflect similar shifts in the workforce as a whole toward a greater share of women, Latinos, Asian Pacific Americans, and older, more-educated workers and a shift out of manufacturing toward services.

day rumors and even the reality of budget cuts and downsizing in our own lives, it can be difficult to remain calm.

That’s one reason to turn to your union, the organization you support with your dues. It is here to provide correct information, enforce the contract, and help you weigh your options.

But just as a panicked swimmer can make a lifeguard’s job more difficult, attacking your union undermines the people you have put in place to fight for you. Not that they won’t do the job, just, as I said, it weighs us down.

As a member-run organization, we survive and grow when CTs step up, out of their individual comfort zones, to assist their union. People are not born knowing how to run an organization. They learn as they go and try to make the right decisions.

Being active in the CTU can be tough, and sometimes mistakes are made or a ball is dropped. Vigilant members are necessary when this happens. We all need to foster a climate that encourages everyone to express his or her opinion, point out mistakes and engage in vigorous debate about the issues.

This is where civility needs to step up. Members need to hold the CTU and its leadership accountable. I ask that we do so in the spirit of contributing to a stronger, more responsive union rather than undermining and weakening one of our greatest assets—our union! Remember, we are, truly, in this together.

Award recognizes educational pursuit and job excellence

MSU is seeking nominations for the newly created Ruth Jameyson “Above and Beyond” Award.

This annual award recognizes support staff members who are pursuing a post-baccalaureate degree while also performing “Above and Beyond” in the scope of their duties at MSU.

In recognition of Jameyson’s own pursuit of a graduate degree while working at MSU, the award recipient must be pursuing a graduate degree at MSU or elsewhere concurrent with their employment at MSU.

A stipend of $2,500 will accompany the award and may be used as determined appropriate by the recipient. The recipient will be honored at the Distinguished Staff Award reception in May.

Jameyson, who died in 2007 at the age of 100 years, served as the Secretary to MSU President Robert S. Shaw from 1938 to 1941 and Secretary/Administrative Assistant to President John A. Hannah from 1941 to 1969.

Nominations are due March 15. Any member of the university community can nominate an employee. The nominee must be a regular, active employee with at least five years of service to Michigan State University in a support staff position and enrolled and attending a post-baccalaureate degree program at Michigan State University or elsewhere.

Nominations will be evaluated for achievement in the following areas:

▼ excellence in overall job performance going “Above and Beyond” what is expected,

▼ outstanding interpersonal skills and working relationships within MSU’s diverse community,

▼ contributions to the department that lead to efficiency, effectiveness or other improvements,

▼ contributions to the University (committees, outreach, projects or other efforts),

▼ concern for students in or out of the classroom,

▼ successful progress toward degree completion. [Amy McCausey]
