Funding the union

The CTU fell two members short of a quorum at a special Membership Meeting on May 19. [Craig Knight]

The meeting had been called to address the need to transfer funds from the union’s Contingency Fund to operations.

Without a transfer, the union will deplete its operating funds this summer.

“I support funding operations on an as-needed basis as we have been doing,” said CTU Treasurer Jan Wallace. “However, for this to work, we need to have quorums at meetings so that members can get information and make decisions. Without that, I believe that we may...”

Parking rates hold for 2010

Parking rates on the MSU main campus will remain the same for 2010-11 as they were for 2009-10, according to Jeannine Lee, the CTU representative to the All University Traffic and Transportation Committee.

The AUTTC is advisory to the Vice President for Finance and Operations. The committee reviews and recommends solutions to campus parking, traffic and transportation problems.

As our representative, Lee shares our questions, concerns and suggestions with the committee. Contact her at 353-9845 or jeannine@msu.edu.

TA for UNTF

After more than 1,000 person-hours of difficult negotiations, the Union of Non-Tenured Faculty reached a tentative agreement on its first contract with the University on May 14. A vote on the TA was scheduled for the following week.

UNTF members were very supportive of their bargaining team throughout the process. The photos on this page were taken at the MSU Administration Building while the Board of Trustees met inside on April 16, 2010. UNTF represents about 600 term-limited faculty at Michigan State University.

The proposed contract provides for greater job security, merit increases and the same health and dental care plans enjoyed by tenure-track faculty, according to the UNTF website.

We’re all busy. It’s an old story. However, I want to take the time to discuss two union developments that are worth our attention.

Microsoft Office Assessment test

The union now offers the same Microsoft Office Assessment software that MSU uses to measure the qualifications of CTs in specific skill areas.

The software evaluates an individual’s skills in Word, Excel, PowerPoint, Access and more. A score of 70% or above is accepted by MSU as proof that the person taking the test meets the minimum qualifications. The union has traditionally said that a person doesn’t need to know specific software to be proficient in a skill. For example, if I’m a whiz at WordPerfect but have no experience in Word, I’m still qualified in word processing.

The union hasn’t changed its position. However, in the current environment, a period of layoffs and bumping, it is in the best interest of each of us to be as prepared as possible.

By quantifying our skills, the assessment tests can help us avoid positions in which we might fail. Remember, failing two trial periods exhausts our bumping and bypass rights, limiting us to bidding on open positions.

Therefore, in addition to updating our resumes, sharpening our skills, and making sure our personnel files reflect our experience and abilities, it is a good idea to quantify our skills by taking the assessment tests at Human Resources.

To meet this concern, the CTU Executive Board voted to purchase the same testing software that MSU uses. We have invested in a site license and equipment that allows us to offer members the opportunity to practice the tests at the CTU office. Call 355-1903 to make an appointment.

Member participation

As you know, we did not achieve a quorum at either the regular Membership Meeting on April 28 or the Special Membership Meeting on May 19.

There are a lot of ways to put together a union. Members of some unions elect to have more of a top-down hierarchy and some depend more on paid staff to make decisions.

By Deb Bittner

Members who have taken the tests have shared their concerns about some of the tests’ idiosyncrasies and their discomfort with being unable to practice before testing on the employer’s equipment. Human Resources has assured us that only the best score is kept on file, but many members wanted an opportunity to be better prepared.

We at CTU have always been proud to be an extremely member-driven organization. [Russell Westbrook II]

In that vein, members have chosen to maintain a great deal of direct member oversight over our finances. While we have not shown a willingness to give up the high level of services we demand from our union, the 75% of our dues allocated to operations has not met expenses for decades.

To address the shortfall, members meet when necessary and vote on whether or not to release monies from the Contingency Fund to cover day-to-day operations. We discuss our options, make suggestions and, of course, argue about our priorities and where to spend and where to save. But, so far, we’ve always done the hard work necessary to get to the difficult decisions.

It is a system that requires member involvement, and the lack of a quorum at recent meetings leaves us in a precarious position. The CTU Executive Board will discuss how to proceed at its June 1 meeting. As always, members are welcome. The meeting starts at 5:15.

The CTU provides many opportunities for participation. Two fun opportunities in the near future are our Annual Picnic (p. 7) and a shopping trip to the Shipshewana Auction and Flea Market (p. 6).

I look forward to seeing you—at the office to check out our new software and at our CTU events.

need to revisit the idea of dues reallocation.”

“We have to pay the staff who work for us,” Wallace added. “Especially now, with all of the layoffs and other job issues, we need to keep our staff. They don’t work for free.”

The CTU Executive Board will discuss the financial situation at their June 1 meeting and make plans on how to proceed, Wallace said.

Currently, 75% of dues goes into a fund for the day-to-day operations of the union (salaries, services, etc.), and 25% is placed in a Contingency Fund. Members must vote to release money from the Contingency Fund for any reason. Rising costs, combined with decreased dues money as a result of a declining membership, has left operations under-funded. CTU members have chosen to meet when needed to vote to release funds from the Contingency Fund for operations.

“Reallocation” would be a decision by the membership to alter the CTU Constitution in a way that would make more of our dues available for operations without requiring special votes.

The special Membership Meeting was called after the regularly scheduled April Membership Meeting fell six members short of the 50 required for a quorum.

The April 28 meeting included a presentation of the 2009 audit by Certified Public Accountant Jim Nyquist of Maner and Costerisan. As always, we received a “clean opinion” of our financial statements, meaning that our finances are presented fairly and conform to generally accepted accounting principles.

Wallace also presented the 2010 budget on behalf of the Executive Board.

CTU Health and Safety Committee Chair Willie Paulsen gave a presentation of Workers Memorial Day, and CTU President Deb Bittner announced the June 10 picnic and led discussions on other union issues.

Door prize winners: Amanda Van-Koevering and Sally Becker won $50 door prizes; Simone Wesley from the Macomb campus won the Solidarity Committee coffee break; Karen Jakus and Betty Walther won CTU t-shirts.
