The Drag

The pavement was hot; the cars glistened under the sun. Engines revved as Jack looked across the lane at his opponent. Sweat dripped from his forehead as he gripped the steering wheel tight. The light turned green, the tires burst into smoke. His car leapt forward fishtailing before finding his line. The rest was history.