Analytical Methods for Lawyers - Microeconomics

Course Objective - Present to students condensed principles of microeconomics to serve as a primer that provides law students the tools necessary to help them succeed as 'lawyers' in the various fields of law that use these principles. The course is intended to either: i) teach you the condensed principles of microeconomics anew, or ii) help refresh your memory as to what constitutes the principles of microeconomics (from a previous class taken some time ago as an undergraduate student) ... The course does not assume you already know the principles of microeconomics and that we will therefore apply the principles to legal questions (as some previous students incorrectly assumed). You are here to learn: 1) some of the principles of microeconomics, 2) the “language” of microeconomics, and 3) to acquire some mastery of what is termed “the microeconomic way of thinking.”
