Relay for Life Info- from Kim Wooten

REGISTRATION - www.acsevents.org/relay/mi/msu and look for the team called "Mortar Board" - don't forget, to get a t-shirt you have to have registered and have $15 in there before spring break!

CASH/CHECKS - still a good way to get donations, make sure you write a receipt for all cash donations (and all donations are tax deductible!) - to enter them into your online account, look under the "Use Tools" link. Also, if your first $15 (the stuff due by next Friday if you want a shirt) is check or cash, I need it by next Friday morning.

LUMINARIAS - for those of you who may have noticed this option on the receipt...they're basically white paper bags the donor gets to decorate in honor of or in memory of (make sure you find out which!) someone they know who has had cancer, and there's a big ceremony at Relay where all the names get read and the bags are all set up...it's supposed to be a $10 donation per bag, but as long as they donate something, that's cool...let me know if you need bags!

COUNTRY? - So the theme this year is something about worldwide, and each team is supposed to pick a location (city, country, whatever) and come up with a cancer fact from that country to share with other teams...let me know if you have any ideas!

WALKING SCHEDULE - it'd be nice to get it done before the next meeting, so send me an email if you know what time you want to walk...it's 10am Saturday to 10am Sunday, and you definitely get cool points if you walk in the middle of the night...it's by 1 hour blocks, so let me know when you can be there!

CEREMONIES - I already mentioned the luminaria ceremony, which will be at 9 on Saturday night, and I'm in charge of the survivor ceremony, which will be at 7 on Saturday night...spread the word to any survivors/cancer patients/caretakers you might know (have them contact me), and there will also be a long distance survivor lap if you want to walk for someone who lives to far away to make it...

ACTIVITIES - there's going to be ice skating, broomball, and all kinds of stupid games during all 24 hours...one of the big events is the Miss Relay pageant, where you find a guy on your team to dress up like Miss Relay and go get money from people there...if there's someone who feels the urge to be Miss Relay, it's at midnight :)
