TOP 15 WARNING SIGNS
THAT A STUDENT-ATHLETE HAS A GAMBLING PROBLEM

1. The student-athlete is always in need of money.
2. The student-athlete has extreme cash flow swings characterized by unexplained mounting debts or the display of large amounts of cash or other material possessions.
3. The student-athlete sells personal belongings to get money.
4. The student-athlete repeatedly borrows or steals from family, friends, teammates, coaches or the institution.
5. The student-athlete seems distracted, moody, sad, worried or nervous.
6. The student-athlete misses commitments with the team, at home or at school, or experiences a sudden drop in grades.
7. The student-athlete demonstrates a loss of appetite or sleeplessness.
8. The student-athlete jeopardizes a significant relationship, job, educational, athletics, or career opportunity because of gambling.
9. The student-athlete makes excessive inquiries about the health of athletes on a team.
10. The student-athlete gets extremely agitated and/or nervous when watching sporting events and is excessively upset when other teams or players lose.
11. The student-athlete frequently uses gambling terminology or the word "bet" in conversation.
12. The student-athlete seems preoccupied with gambling and/or betting.
13. The student-athlete has a relationship with a bookie or an account with an Internet or telephone gambling service.
14. The student-athlete goes to gambling establishments, such as casinos or betting parlors, with friends.
15. The student-athlete receives gambling paraphernalia from Internet sports betting sites or possesses gambling-related items, such as lottery tickets, betting sheets, casino chips or other souvenirs from gambling locations.