Letter from Cathy—2010 Big Ten Preview

When we look at the season, we divide into 3 segments. The first 6 weeks were about our growth and development. Now as we reflect, we realize that we come a long way, but still have room for improvement. Although we have had some setbacks due to injury, we have made great strides in developing the all around game for many of our front row attackers. Honestly—it gave us the opportunity to play around with many different options and looks for our 2010 squad. The next segment leads us into the first round of conference action. As we approach an exciting weekend at Breslin we are optimistic about our team's progress. We know that conference is, again, full of top-ranked opponents, and are sure this year will be no different.

This weekend we welcome Minnesota, currently ranked #14 nationally, and Iowa. We are lucky to be able to host the opening weekend in such a beautiful venue and hope you will come out to get us started off on the right track! We are encouraged that the SideOut Club is continuing to grow with record numbers and thank you for your ongoing support!!

Breslin Welcomes Volleyball

The Breslin Center graciously welcomes MSU Volleyball into their home for the first two Big Ten match-ups on Friday, September 24th and Saturday, September 25th. Come cheer on your favorite team as we take on Minnesota and Iowa! Fill the stands and join in on the many activities Spartan Volleyball provides for you. Go Green!

Parking for Volleyball Games

Attention all Volleyball fans you may NOT park on the grass, along curbs, in fire lanes, in loading areas or obstruct traffic in any way. On Saturday and Sundays you may park for free in lots 67 (Jenison), 62 West, 79 and along Dem Hall Road as long as you are parked in designated parking spaces (as long as there isn’t a football, basketball or hockey game). During the week lot 67 is reserved Monday-Friday from 7 am to 6pm.

Media Guides are now available...

Don’t forget to pick up your 2010 MSU Volleyball media guide filled with volleyball history and player bios. Don’t miss this opportunity to get to know more about the staff, players and coaches! Want to know who holds the highest hitting percentage? Find it in the Media Guide! It’s time for the fans to get educated on what MSU volleyball is all about. Also, don’t forget to pick up your official lapel pin. Show your support, pick up a media guide and pin at the SideOut Club before every game.

In this section we hope to answer some of the more common questions asked by our SideOut Club of the staff. If you have a question that you’d like answered in an upcoming newsletter, let me know and I’ll do my best! Email me at: gawlikmi@ath.msu.edu

Question: What’s a 6-2 offense? What are the Pros and Cons?

Answer: I thought I’d take the time in this newsletter to address the 2 main types of offenses used in volleyball. First, we’ll start with the 6-2 offense. Why is it called a 6-2 you might ask... Good question. The 6 represents the number of hitters on the floor while the 2 represents the number of setters. Ok math majors, how many players does that put in the game? 8? Well, no. In a 6-2 offense, the coach may chose to sub out a setter when they enter in the front row to replace them with an attacker that is more offensive. When choosing to do that, the coach must make sure that another setter, or player capable of doing both skills, is entering the right back position. The 6-2 offense can be run with 8, 7, or 6 players (not counting the libero or defensive substitutions.) In the case of Michigan State Volleyball, we run the 6-2 offense with 7 players because Natalie Emro acts as both a setter (when in back row) AND a hitter (when in front row). We currently have a player come off the bench to play right side for our second setter (Nicole or Kristen) when Natalie rotates to the back row.

Pros of the 6-2:

• This offense allows teams to put a lot of pressure on the opposing blockers. By having 3 front row players at all times throughout the match, the blockers must communicate and move well to cover all 9 meters of net! A team that chooses to run a 6-2 is does their best to spread the blockers apart and get 1-on-1 opportunities.

• This offense may allow smaller setters to have success because their blocking/attacking is no longer a liability to the team when they’re in the front row.

Cons of the 6-2

• Multiple substitutions every 3 rotations add up quickly and the rules only allow you 12 subs per game... if the game moves too quickly, you may be in a position where you have to keep a smaller player in for a full rotation.

• 2 setters can mean 2 different setting styles for the same hitters. It’s important that teams choosing to run a 6-2 have setters that can be consistent with each others timing.

• Setters coming off the bench can find their rhythm disrupted with various movement in and out of the game.
Question & Answer

Question #2: What’s a 5-1 offense? What are the Pros and Cons

Answer: OK, now that the 6-2 is understood, I’m sure the 5-1 won’t be hard to follow. The 5 stands for the number of attackers in the game, while the 1 stands for the number of setters. Very simply put, the setter will be the setter regardless of their rotation on the floor. They set from the front row as well as the back row. Internationally, this is almost exclusively the offense that is run—not for the purpose of it being better or worse (keep in mind that NCAA teams have won national championships with both styles of offense), but rather because their substitutions within the game are more strictly limited to 6, with no player allowed to enter or exit the game twice.

Pros of the 5-1

• If run with a physical setter—the setter can jump and attack/tip/dump the 2nd contact, catching the defense off guard and by surprise.

• Middle attackers can freely move behind the setters for slides and back quick attacks. Keep in mind that this is possible with a 6-2, but requires more communication and coordination between players.

• There is 1 leader, 1 setting style, and a continuous rhythm to the offense.

• Substitutions are less of a factor and a coach and have the freedom to move players in and out of the game (perhaps for serving or blocking) with less fear of running out of subs.

Cons of the 5-1

• A smaller setter may get abused as a blocker—remember, they must play all 6 rotations.

• If the setter is not an attacking threat (by way of dump/tip), the opposing blockers can choose to block your other 2 players with 3 blockers—leaving the setter all alone.

Other offenses—more commonly use in middle schools or Rec leagues include:

4-2 Setter is always in right FRONT—therefore only 4 attackers are in the front row. This is easier for setters who don’t move well, as they are almost standing in the setting target zone.

6-6 Everyone sets out of the FRONT MIDDLE as they rotate around. 6 Attackers, 6 setters
