An angry iPhone buyer is suing Apple for $1 million (£ 490,000) after it cut the price of the device by $200 less than three months after its launch in the United States. Dongmei Li, of New York, who bought a 4GB iPhone in July, accuses Apple of "price discrimination, underselling, discrimination in rebates, deceptive actions and other wrongdoings". Apple reduced the price of the 8GB iPhone to $399 last month and discontinued the 4GB model. (Rhys Blakely)
