I. I intend that we J
   A. Condition (i): we each intend that we J – see p. 41
   B. Questions
      1. How does this ensure “an intention-like commitment to our activity is at work in the practical thinking of each” (42)?
      2. Why is MB worried about circularity? How does he avoid it?

II. Interlocking and Reflexive Intentions
   A. Condition (ii): we each intend the following: that we J by way of the intentions of each that we J (and that the route from these intentions to our joint activity satisfies the connection condition) – see p. 52
   B. Questions
      1. How does this support treating someone like an intention co-participant?
      2. How does he involve Grice in here?
      3. How does reflexivity get into the picture, given this construction?

III. Meshing Sub-plans
   A. Condition (iii): we each intend the following: that we J by way of meshing sub-plans of each of our intentions in favor of Jing
   B. Questions
      1. What is it for sub-plans to “mesh”?
      2. What supports meshing? What undermines it?

IV. Common Knowledge
   A. Condition (vii): there is common knowledge among the participants of the conditions cited in this construction – see p. 58
   B. Questions
      1. What are the differences between the individual case and the shared case when it comes to common knowledge?
      2. What account of common knowledge does he help himself to?
